

The Inaugural
Tobias Center Conference:
VISIONS OF DEVELOPMENT

November 10-11, 2017

SCHOOL OF GLOBAL AND INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

TOBIAS CENTER FOR
INNOVATION IN INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

2017 Inaugural Tobias Center Conference: Visions of Development

School of Global and International Studies
Indiana University Bloomington

Global and International Studies Building
355 North Jordan Avenue

Panels will take place in the Auditorium, except as noted

How best to assist countries in need while fostering their self-sufficiency is a question that engages policymakers, non-governmental organizations, and corporations alike. It's a challenge at the heart of The Randall L. and Deborah F. Tobias Center for Innovation in International Development at Indiana University's School of Global and International Studies. The center's scholars spearhead research into practices that encourage the most effective development and the best ways to measure progress. They identify innovative approaches to international assistance and investigate foreign aid's effect on the environment and public health. A laboratory for international research, the Tobias Center is also a training ground for the next generation of leaders in the field of development assistance.

The Inaugural Tobias Center Conference: VISIONS OF DEVELOPMENT

Friday, November 10

- 8:30 am – 9:00 am Registration Auditorium Lobby
- 9:00 am – 9:30 am Welcome and Opening Remarks
Lee Feinstein, Dean, School of Global and International Studies, Indiana University
Michael A. McRobbie, President, Indiana University
- 9:30 am – 11:00 am Global Health and Development: HIV/AIDS and Beyond
Moderator: Yan Long, SGIS
Panelists: Mark Dybul, Center for Global Health and Quality, Georgetown University Medical Center
Shawn Gibbs, School of Public Health, Indiana University
Hank Tomlinson, Principal Deputy Director for the Division of Global HIV & TB, Centers for Disease Control
- 11:00 am – 11:15 am Coffee Break
- 11:15 am – 12:15 pm Keynote Address: Senator Richard G. Lugar
- 12:15 pm – 1:45 pm Lunch (Panelists and Invited Guests) GISB 1060
- 2:00 pm – 3:30 pm Nation Building in Afghanistan
Moderator: Nick Cullather, SGIS
Panelists: Jennifer Fluri, University of Colorado
Artemy Kalinovsky, Universiteit van Amsterdam
Gen. David Rodriguez (USA, Ret.), former
Commander, International Security Assistance
Force Joint Command and Deputy Commander,
U.S. Forces – Afghanistan
Abdulkader Sinno, School of Global and International Studies, Indiana University
- 3:30 pm – 3:45 pm Coffee Break

Friday, November 10

3:45 pm – 5:00 pm

Incentivizing Sustainable Development

Moderator: Sarah Bauerle Danzman, SGIS

Panelists: Roberto Echandi, Competitiveness Trade and Global Practice, World Bank Group
Adam Hitchcock, Guggenheim Partners
Bostjan Skalar, World Association of Investment Promotion Agency
Anh Tran, School of Public and Environmental Affairs, Indiana University

Saturday, November 11

8:30 am – 9:00 am

Registration

Auditorium Lobby

9:00 am – 10:30 am

Local Livelihoods, the Environment, and Development

Moderator: Jessica Steinberg, SGIS

Panelists: Eduardo Brondizio, Department of Anthropology, Indiana University
Jon Eldon, University of California – Santa Cruz
Angela Musimbi Lusigi, Strategic Advisor, UNDP Regional Bureau for Africa

10:30 am – 10:45 am

Coffee Break

10:45 am – 12:15 pm

Metrics for Development

Moderator: Stephen Macekura, SGIS

Panelists: Sameeksha Desai, School of Public and Environmental Affairs, Indiana University
Bernard Funck, former World Bank Sector Director, Middle East and North Africa
Morten Jerven, Lund University
Una Osili, Lilly Family School of Philanthropy, Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis

12:15 pm – 1:30 pm

Lunch & Debrief: Envisioning Next Steps

Keynote Speaker

Richard G. Lugar is the President of The Lugar Center, a non-profit organization focusing on global food security, WMD non-proliferation, aid effectiveness, and bipartisan governance. Senator Lugar also serves as a Professor of Practice and Distinguished Scholar at the School of Global and International Studies at Indiana University. Senator Lugar graduated from Denison University and attended Pembroke College at Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar. He volunteered for the U.S. Navy in 1957, ultimately serving as an intelligence briefer for Admiral Arleigh Burke, Chief of Naval Operations. A fifth generation Hoosier, Senator Lugar left the United States Senate as the longest-serving member of Congress in Indiana history. Before his election to the Senate, Senator Lugar helped manage the family's food machinery manufacturing business in Indianapolis, served on the Indianapolis Board of School Commissioners, and served two terms as mayor of Indianapolis. During his six terms in the Senate, he exercised leadership on critical issues such as food security, nuclear non-proliferation, energy independence, and free trade. In 1991, he forged a bipartisan partnership with then-Senate Armed Services Chairman Sam Nunn (D-Ga.) to destroy weapons of mass destruction in the former Soviet Union. To date, the Nunn-Lugar program has deactivated more than 7,600 nuclear warheads that were once aimed at the United States.

Featured Speakers

Eduardo S. Brondizio is Professor of Anthropology, Department of Anthropology, Indiana University Bloomington, where he also directs the Center for the Analysis of Social-Ecological Landscapes (CASEL). Brondizio has been working in the Amazon for the past three decades focusing on the study of rural populations, household economy and demography, institutions, and land use change with particular attention to their interactions with markets, development programs, conservation policies, and climate/environmental change. During the last decade, this work has expanded to the study of rural-urban networks, urban vulnerability to climate change, and the impact of expanding inter-urban networks on rural and indigenous areas. Brondizio has contributed to the development of methodologies integrating ethnography, household surveys, remote sensing, geospatial analysis, and social-ecological systems frameworks. Brondizio serves on numerous international scientific boards in the Americas, Europe, and Asia including the Science Committee of the Future Earth program and the UNESCO Sustainability Science initiative. He is currently Co-Chair of the Global Assessment of Biodiversity and Ecosystem Services (2016-2019) of the Inter-governmental Science-Policy Platform on Biodiversity and Ecosystem Services (IPBES). Brondizio serves as Co-Editor-in-Chief of Current Opinion on Environmental Sustainability.

Nick Cullather is a historian of U.S. foreign relations and international development. His latest book The Hungry World (2010) is a history of the Green Revolution, which has been seen as a foreign aid success story. Cullather's work looks at the environmental and political effects of aid programs over time, and how ambitions of modernization and nation-building shape U.S. foreign relations.

Sarah Bauerle Danzman's research strives to understand and explain when and how government, business, and society can work together to generate shared prosperity. To do so, she uses a mixture of quantitative and qualitative social science methods to explore the international political economy of foreign investment policies and promotion, investor behavior, and the relationship between global and local business elites. She is currently completing a book project that examines how domestic firms manage policies toward foreign investment to their benefit. Her research has been published or is forthcoming in International Studies Quarterly, Perspectives on Politics, and International Interactions. Bauerle Danzman also works with the investment promotion and economic development community, especially the World Association of Investment Promotion Agencies, and she has participated in multiple high-level international policy conferences related to global investment and development. She earned a PhD in Political Science from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill and was previously a post-doctoral scholar at Princeton University's Niehaus Center for Globalization and Governance.

Sameeksha Desai is an Associate Professor at the School of Public and Environmental Affairs and Associate Director of the Institute for Development Strategies at Indiana University. Desai's research is on entrepreneurship, economic development, and public policy. She focuses on how policy and political conditions shape market entry and micro level growth outcomes. Her current work is on the role of policy in mitigating threats like terrorism for entrepreneurs in cities. She has published articles in management, economics and political science journals, such as Research Policy, Journal of Economic Behavior and Organization, Journal of Conflict Resolution, and Small Business Economics, as well as policy reports for international and private organizations and a forthcoming book on corruption, entrepreneurship and social welfare. Desai is an affiliated researcher at the Swedish Entrepreneurship Forum and an Editor of Small Business Economics. She works as a consultant for international and private organizations; she previously worked at the Max Planck Institute of Economics and the University of Missouri in Kansas City. Desai holds a PhD from George Mason University.

Mark Dybul, MD, is the Faculty Co-Director of the Center for Global Health and Quality and Professor in the Department of Medicine at Georgetown University Medical Center. Dybul has worked on HIV and public health for more than 25 years as a clinician, scientist, teacher, and administrator, most recently as the Executive Director of the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria. After graduating from Georgetown Medical School in Washington D.C., Dybul joined the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, as a research fellow under director Dr. Anthony Fauci, where he conducted basic and clinical studies on HIV virology, immunology and treatment optimization, including the first randomized, controlled trial with combination antiretroviral therapy in Africa. Dybul was one of the founding architects in the formation of the U.S. President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief, better known as PEPFAR. After serving as Chief Medical officer, Assistant, Deputy and Acting Director, he was appointed as its leader in 2006, becoming U.S. Global AIDS Coordinator, with the rank of Ambassador at the level of an Assistant Secretary of State. He served until early 2009. Dybul has written extensively in scientific and policy literature, and has received several Honorary Degrees and awards, including a Doctor of Science, Honoris Causa, from Georgetown University.

Roberto Echandi is the Investment Policy Global Lead of the Investment Climate Unit of the Trade and Competitiveness Global Practice of the World Bank Group. Prior to joining the World Bank Group, he was Director of the Program on International Investment at the World Trade Institute (WTI) of the University of Bern. Echandi is also a member of the Faculty of the Masters in International Law and Economics (MILE) at the WTI, and of the Masters in International Economic Law (IELPO) at the University of Barcelona. Echandi has served as Ambassador of Costa Rica to Belgium, Luxembourg and the European Union; as Special Adjunct Ambassador for U.S. Trade Affairs and Costa Rica's negotiator in the US-Central America Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA); as the head of Costa Rican delegations to multiple trade and investment bilateral and regional negotiations; as Director-General for International Trade at the Ministry of Foreign Trade of Costa Rica; and as legal advisor to the Appellate Body Secretariat of the World Trade Organization (WTO). He has also been Adjunct Professor of Law, Visiting Scholar and Fellow at the Institute for International Economic Law (IEL) of the Georgetown University Law Center. He has published more than 30 international contributions on the legal and political economy dimensions of investment issues, dispute settlement, trade in services and regional economic integration in the Americas.

Jon Eldon recently returned from three years of working within an international NGO in West Africa where he studied agricultural ecology and soil science in the context of rural development to complete his PhD at the University of California – Santa Cruz. His research focuses on farmer adaptation and agro-ecosystem management, with an emphasis on collaborative research methods in complex agricultural systems. With his recent work in Senegal and The Gambia, he secured support from the Alliance for a Green Revolution in Africa, USAID, and Australia Aid to conduct over 1000 farmer field trials that tested alternative crop management practices across a socially and spatially heterogeneous landscape. He has also worked in semi-subsistence agriculture in the South Pacific and highly commercialized production in California and Oregon. He previously studied ecology at Stanford University (BS '05) and University of Hawaii (MS '10).

Lee Feinstein is founding Dean and Professor of International Studies at the School of Global and International Studies at Indiana University Bloomington. Prior to joining SGIS, he served as U.S. Ambassador to the Republic of Poland (2009-2012). Before that he was a senior fellow and deputy director of studies at the Council on Foreign Relations, specializing in U.S. foreign policy, international institutions and national security affairs. He served on the Presidential Transition Team for President Obama and as Principal Deputy Director and member of the Policy Planning Staff at the Department of State from 1994-2001. Feinstein serves on the board of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, a presidentially appointed position, and is a member of the Museum's Executive Council. He is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, and serves on the Board of the Kosciuszko Foundation, on the Advisory Council of the Indiana University Center for Global Health, and on the Indiana Advisory Committee of the U.S. Global Leadership Coalition. He is the author of Means to an End: U.S. Interest and the International Criminal Court (with Tod Lindberg), and a regular commentator on international affairs.

Jennifer L. Fluri is an Associate Professor in the Department of Geography at the University of Colorado-Boulder. She is a feminist political geographer interested in gender, geopolitics, and international aid/development in South Asia with a focus on Afghanistan. She has published over twenty peer reviewed journal articles. She has recently co-authored a book with Rachel Lehr entitled The Carpetbaggers of Kabul and other American-Afghan Entanglements, published in 2017 by University of Georgia Press as part of the Geographies of Social Justice series. She is one of four co-authors of the 2017 book Feminist Spaces: Gender and Geography in a Global Context published by Routledge. Her current research project, which was funded by the United States Institute for Peace and the University of Colorado, examines the role of Afghan women's rights activists, community leaders, and Civil Society Organizations in peace building and conflict mediation in Afghanistan.

Bernard Funck is now an independent economic adviser. His most recent positions at the World Bank were that of Global Leader for Macroeconomics, and Director of the Economic and Governance Department for the Arab World. During his career, he managed strategic and policy dialogues, applied policy research, and staff across countries of all income levels (from Czech Republic to Yemen or Madagascar) and sizes (from Egypt and Turkey to Montenegro) and wrestling with anything from global financial crisis (e.g., Hungary, Philippines) to transition and global integration (e.g., Eastern Europe, Kazakhstan) as well as gradual change (e.g., Morocco), from upheavals (e.g., Syria and its impact on surrounding countries) and revolutions (e.g., Tunisia) to nation building (e.g., Kosovo, Palestine) and post-conflict recovery (e.g., Cambodia, the Balkans). Before joining the World Bank, Funck worked as an economist in the Research Department of the Belgian central bank and at the Belgian Planning Bureau. He holds Master degrees in Economics and in Philosophy from the Catholic University of Louvain at Louvain-la-Neuve, Belgium.

Shawn Gibbs, PhD, MBA, CIH is Executive Associate Dean, Interim Associate Dean for Research, and Professor with the Indiana University School of Public Health-Bloomington. Gibbs has over a hundred peer reviewed papers in industrial hygiene and environmental exposure assessment, focusing on environmental microbiology and disrupting transmission of highly infectious diseases. He was a 2006 U.S. Faculty Fulbright Scholar to Egypt, and has been PI of three Public Health Fulbright Junior Faculty Development Programs (Egypt and Libya). His research has helped to determine national policies, procedure, and best practices to treat patients with Ebola virus disease and other highly infectious diseases; including patient transportation, waste handling/disposal, patient discharge, patient remains, PPE donning and doffing, decontamination, etc. Gibbs previously had leadership roles in several organizations and centers, such as the Nebraska Biocontainment Unit, and helped in the development of the National Ebola Training and Education Center, funded by US DHHS. Gibbs is co-PI of the Biosafety and Infectious Disease Training Initiative, a NIEHS funded consortium, and has multiple global projects associated with addressing and disrupting the spread of highly infectious diseases.

Adam Hitchcock is a managing director at Guggenheim Partners. Before joining Guggenheim, he served as the chief of staff of the White House Council of Economic Advisers. In this role, he managed the staff and operations of the Council and was the strategic adviser to the Council's chairman. Prior to that, Hitchcock served as a special assistant in the White House Office of the Chief of Staff, where he provided counsel and support to President Obama's senior advisors. Before joining the Obama Administration, Hitchcock was on the Obama-Biden White House Transition Project and the Obama 2008 presidential campaign. Previously, he worked for Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley. Hitchcock is a member of the Dean's Council at Indiana University's School of Global and International Studies, is on the Board of Advisors at the Truman

National Security Project, serves on the Studies Committee at the Chicago Council on Global Affairs and is a member of the Atlantic Council. He was a lecturer at the University of Chicago for four years teaching a class on global macro. He is involved with the non-profit community in Chicago serving on the board of Urban Initiatives and leadership council of A Better Chicago. Adam earned his B.A. from Indiana University and J.D. from DePaul University College of Law.

Morton Jerven has a PhD in Economic History from the London School of Economics, and is the author of the book Poor Numbers: How We Are Misled by African Development Statistics and What to Do About It (Cornell University Press, 2013). He has since published a more detailed study of what happened to the economic growth evidence in Botswana, Kenya, Tanzania, and Zambia from 1965 to 1995 with Oxford University Press. He edited two volumes with Routledge: Measuring African Development: Past and Present and Statistical Tragedy in Africa?: Evaluating the Database for African Economic Development. His most recent book is Africa: Why Economists Get It Wrong. He is currently Professor in Development Studies at Norwegian University of Life Sciences and Visiting Professor in Economic History at Lund University.

Artemy M. Kalinovsky is Assistant Professor of East European Studies at the Universiteit van Amsterdam, where he teaches courses on Soviet history, Russian foreign policy, Central Asia, and counterinsurgency. He is the author of A Long Goodbye: The Soviet Withdrawal from Afghanistan (Harvard University Press, 2011) and Laboratory of Socialist Development: Cold War Politics and Decolonization in Soviet Tajikistan (Cornell University Press, 2018), as well as the editor of a number of volumes on Cold War and Soviet history. His writing has also appeared in publications such as Foreign Affairs, Foreign Policy, the Washington Post, Open Democracy, and the Moscow Times. He earned his PhD in International History from the London School of Economics.

Yan Long is a political and organizational sociologist with research interests in the evolution of transnational institutions and their impact on existing forms of domination and resistance. She examines how transnational AIDS institutions shape domestic politics of public health. Long is working on a book called "Side Effects: The Transnational Doing and Undoing of AIDS Politics in China." It highlights the unintended consequences of external interventions that resulted in strengthened state apparatus, and expanded mobilization for urban gay males but demobilization for other communities such as female sex workers and infected peasants. Her research also focuses on how macro-level changes in medical care policies affect the concepts of disease, illness, and sickness in organizing certain interventions/treatment behaviors of individuals. She is also developing a new digital humanities project, Archiving Chinese Grassroots NGOs. By exploring innovative research methods to track longitudinal data from 1995-2020, she will compare organizational landscapes and networks of NGO sectors as health, gender, and environmental ones in China.

Angela Musimbi Lusigi is a strategic advisor for UNDP's Regional Bureau for Africa. She has over 17 years of experience in socio-economic analysis, pro-poor policy development, resource mobilization, programme management and UN Coordination. She leads in the development of UNDP's Regional Human Development Report for Africa and contributes to the annual African Economic Outlook working closely with the African Development Bank, and the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development. She has broad experience in development, gained from working for several UN agencies including UNDP, UNEP (UNDP-UNEP Poverty and Environment Initiative), the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) and the UN Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) at national and HQ levels. She has worked in Botswana, Italy, Kenya, Nigeria, South Africa, Tanzania, and Zambia. Lusigi holds a Masters and a Doctoral degree in agricultural economics from the University of Reading in the United Kingdom and a Bachelor's degree (honors) in economics and computer science from the University of Waterloo in Canada.

Stephen Macekura is Assistant Professor of International Studies at Indiana University. He is a historian with a particular focus on the history of U.S. foreign relations, international development and political economy, and environmental thought and politics. His first book, Of Limits and Growth: The Rise of Global 'Sustainable Development' in the Twentieth Century, was published by Cambridge University Press in 2015. He is currently working on two major projects. The first is a global history of international development, co-edited with Erez Manela, entitled The Development Century: A Global History, under contract with Cambridge University Press. The second is a book on the meaning and measurement of economic growth in the twentieth century world. Stephen has also published many articles and essays in edited volumes, periodicals, and scholarly journals. He received his PhD in history from the University of Virginia in 2013.

Michael A. McRobbie has served as president of Indiana University since 2007. He previously served as IU's vice president for information technology and chief information officer, as vice president for research, and as interim provost and vice president for academic affairs for IU Bloomington. Under McRobbie's leadership, IU has seen a major expansion in the size and quality of its student body, a reinvigoration of the global partnerships that support the university's international academic programs, an extensive program of building, with the renovation and construction of nearly 70 major new buildings with a total value approaching $2 billion, and a large-scale academic restructuring of the university, with the establishment or reconfiguration of eight new schools. A native of Australia, McRobbie received a PhD from the Australian National University. He is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations.

Una O. Osili, PhD, is an economist with significant experience in research and policy in the fields of household behavior and economic policy. She is the Associate Dean for Research and International Programs at the Indiana University Lilly Family School of Philanthropy, the world's first school dedicated to increasing the understanding of philanthropy and improving its practice worldwide. Osili directs the school's extensive research program with its partners including Bank of America, United Way Worldwide, Coutts Inc, and National Collegiate Athletic Association. She leads the research and publication of Giving USA, Index of Global Philanthropy, Remittances and Index of Philanthropic Freedom and pioneered new approaches to using data to better understand global and national trends in philanthropy. Osili is a member of the graduate school faculty at Indiana University. She earned her BA in Economics at Harvard University, and her MA and PhD in Economics from Northwestern University.

General (Retired) David M. Rodriguez served over 40 years in the United States Army with his final assignment being the Commander of the United States Africa Command. A native of West Chester Pennsylvania, he earned his commission from the United States Military Academy at West Point, New York in 1976. General Rodriguez has commanded at every level to include Commanding General of Army Forces Command, Commander of the International Security Assistance Force – Joint Command in Afghanistan, Commander of the 82nd Airborne Division in Afghanistan, Commander of the Multi-National Force North West in Iraq, 2nd Brigade, 82nd Airborne Division, and 2nd Battalion, 502nd Infantry Regiment, 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault). He commanded companies in the 75th Ranger Regiment and the 1st Armored Division. His commands included 4 years in combat at the 2 and 3 star level. He also served as the Senior Military Advisor to Secretary of Defense Gates as a 3 star. His education includes a Master of Arts in National Security and Strategic Studies from the United States Naval War College and a Master of Military Art and Science from the United States Army Command and General Staff College.

Abdulkader Sinno is an Associate Professor of Political Science and Middle Eastern Studies at Indiana University, Bloomington. He received his PhD from UCLA in 2002, was a CISAC Postdoctoral Fellow at Stanford University in 2002-03, a 2009 Carnegie Scholar, and a 2014-15 Fellow at the Woodrow Wilson Center. His first book, Organizations at War in Afghanistan and Beyond (Cornell University Press, 2008; 2010 paperback edition) develops an organizational theory to explain the evolution and outcomes of civil wars, ethnic strife and military occupations. He is also editor of Muslims in Western Politics (Indiana University Press, 2009) and the author of articles and book chapters on Muslim minority political representation in Western liberal democracies, public attitudes towards Muslim immigration, the Arab Spring, conflict processes, and Islamist parties' participation in elections. His articles are published in both qualitative (e.g. American Historical Review) and quantitative (e.g. Journal of Conflict Resolution) journals.

Boštjan Skalar is CEO of World Association of Investment Promotion Agencies. WAIPA is the umbrella organization of worldwide investment promotion agencies established in 1995 in Geneva with UNCTAD's initiative. Previously he served as a Director of Slovenian Public Agency for Promotion of Investment, Internationalization, Entrepreneurship and Tourism (SPIRIT). He is also a former Consul for Economic Affairs in Turkey. He studied in the Faculty of Economics in Maribor where he graduated in marketing. He has effectively managed companies in the automobile sector, the printing industry, worked with cladding materials and also worked in the real estate sector where his travels took him to many countries. He has over 20 years of management experience and is one of the global leaders in investment promotion with a private-sector focus.

Jessica Steinberg is assistant professor of International Studies at the School of Global and International Studies, and Adjunct Professor of Political Science, at Indiana University-Bloomington. She is also a faculty affiliate of the Ostrom Workshop on Political Theory and Policy Analysis. Steinberg's areas of interest include the political economy of development, governance, and violent conflict. Her book project explores the local politics of natural resource extraction to understand goods provision, protest and repression in extractive regions. She also studies conflict events data reporting, FDI regulatory compliance in developing countries, and common pool resources and livelihoods. Steinberg has conducted field work in DRC, Mozambique, Senegal, and Zambia. Her work has been published in the Journal of Conflict Resolution, Political Geography, Perspectives on Politics, and Environmental Letters. She received a PhD in Political Science from the University of Michigan in 2014 and a BA in Political Science from Stanford University in 2006.

Hank Tomlinson, PhD, serves as the Principal Deputy Director for the Division of Global HIV & TB (DGHT), following his position as the Country Director and DGHT Program Director for the CDC field office in Nigeria. Tomlinson began his career at CDC in 2008 in the Division of HIV/AIDS Prevention where his work focused on strengthening the capacity of the HIV workforce to implement science- and evidence-based interventions for HIV prevention, care and treatment. Tomlinson earned his bachelor's degree in psychology from Emory University and his doctoral degree in clinical psychology from Duke University. He completed his residency in clinical psychology at the University of Maryland Medical Center and Baltimore VA Hospital. His published work addresses the epidemiology of HIV among men who have sex with men; the development, evaluation, and dissemination of interventions to reduce sexual risk behavior for acquisition and transmission of HIV; and the diffusion of innovations.

Anh Tran is an Associate Professor of Public Policy at Indiana University and an Advisor to the Prime Minister of Vietnam. His research focuses on the development and governance of developing countries, particularly in Asia. He also works frequently as a consultant for reform initiatives by national governments, the United Nations and the World Bank. Anh has participated in UNDP Academic Fellowship, Asia Foundation's Emerging Leaders Program and Vietnamese Prime Minister's Research Council. Born in Hanoi, he has studied and worked in Russia, France, Australia and the United States. He coordinates V-idea, which is a global network of leading Vietnamese and international scholars working on Vietnam's development (www.sangkienvietnam.org). He also manages the Vietnam Young Leader Award (www.vyla.info), which selects and brings outstanding Vietnamese public officials to the US for a Master and PhD program. Tran received his PhD in Public Policy from Harvard University.

SCHOOL OF GLOBAL AND INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

TOBIAS CENTER FOR INNOVATION IN INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

INDIANA UNIVERSITY
SCHOOL OF GLOBAL AND INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

Established in 2012, the School of Global and International Studies at IU Bloomington promotes understanding of contemporary and global issues, informed by a deep knowledge of history, culture and language. The school is making one of the nation's largest investments in global studies, with the addition of 25 new faculty members and the opening of its LEED-certified building, inaugurated by the Secretary of State in 2015.

355 North Jordan Avenue | Bloomington, IN 47405

sgis.indiana.edu

GLOBALLY READY